

Lola Olley, VP Asst. Counsel, JP Morgan Chase

Lola is an attorney, advocate, mom, wife and podcast host. She currently serves as an Assistant General Counsel and Vice President at JPMorgan Chase within the Consumer and Community Banking Division. Prior to her work at JPMorgan Chase, Lola has extensive experience working in the public sector in both Illinois and Texas. In Illinois, she enjoyed tenures at the Illinois Attorney General's Office, the Illinois Governor's Office and the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, where she was the Deputy General Counsel of the agency. Her most recent public sector experience was as an Assistant City Attorney for the City of Plano where she negotiated, drafted and reviewed contracts for the IT department and advised on data privacy and cyber risks associated with technology procurement.

In addition to her legal pursuits, Lola is also the host of the Not Your Mama's Autism Podcast where she discusses her family's multigenerational autism journey and touches upon a wide range of topics from health care to policing practices with neurodiversity in mind. Lola is the older sister to a non-verbal autistic man and the mother of two children on the autism spectrum. In her spare time, she enjoys podcasting, writing and playing basketball. Lola lives with her husband and two children north of Dallas.
